

CONTENTS

Notes on contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii

Introduction: popular culture and soft power in the social media age Youna Kim	1
---	---

PART I
Parasite	39

1 Producers of Parasite and the question of film authorship: producing a global author, authoring a global production Dong Hoon Kim	41
2 Parasite and the global arrival of Korean cinema: notes from the underground Charles K. Armstrong	54
3 The transcultural logic of capital: the house and stairs in Parasite Yoon Jeong Oh	67
4 Gender and class in Parasite Kelly Y. Jeong	79

- 5 One-inch-tall barrier of subtitles: translating invisibility
in Parasite 90
Jieun Kiaer and Loli Kim

PART II
BTS 105

- 6 BTS and the world music industry 107
Kyung Hyun Kim
- 7 BTS, the highest stage of K-pop 118
John Lie
- 8 BTS, alternative masculinity and its discontents 129
Gooyong Kim
- 9 Transnational cultural power of BTS: digital fan activism
in the social media era 142
Dal Yong Jin
- 10 BTS as cultural ambassadors: K-pop and Korea in Western media 155
Sarah Keith

PART III
Drama 169

- 11 K-dramas meet Netflix: new models of collaboration with the digital West 171
Hyejung Ju
- 12 Mediating Asian modernities: the lessons of Korean dramas 184
Lisa Y.M. Leung
- 13 The rise of K-dramas in the Middle East: cultural proximity and soft power 196
Yeşim Kaptan and Murat Tutucu

14	Korean dramas, circulation of affect and digital assemblages: Korean soft power in the United States Ji-Yeon O. Jo	208
15	North Korea and South Korean popular culture in the digital age Youna Kim	220
	Index	235