

CONTENTS

PREFACE	ix	Population size	59
INTRODUCTION	3	Technical progress	65
The neo-classical approach to productive organization	3	The role of agriculture	68
Aspects of the 'marginal revolution'	7	The rate of interest	70
'Progress' in economics	11	International adjustment mechanisms	73
Smithian economics: some problems of interpretation	17	The physiocratic literature	78
Plan of work	22	II/The economics of Adam Smith	93
I/Aspects of the pre-Smithian literature	25	3
I		THE INDUSTRY STRUCTURE	95
AUTOMATIC EQUILIBRATING PROCESSES	27	The agricultural sector	95
The scholastic tradition	27	The manufacturing sector	98
Seventeenth-century pamphlet literature	33	Industrial organization	103
Some major eighteenth- century contributions	37	Manufacturing inputs	106
The Physiocrats	44	Mining and metallurgy	108
2		Summary and conclusion	109
ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT	52	4
The mercantilist literature	52	THE THEORY OF VALUE	114
		Price determination	114
		The concept of competition	125
		The role of utility and demand	133

viii CONTENTS

5		The desirability of economic development	246
THE THEORY OF DISTRIBUTION	144	Government intervention in economic development	256
The national income accounts	144	Government and the labour market	258
The distributive shares	147	Alternative policy objectives	264
Factor productivity	148	Summary and conclusion	266
Factor supply	160
The theory as-a-whole	171	9
The declining rate of profit	179	FOREIGN TRADE: THEORY AND POLICY	268
		Vent-for-surplus theory	268
6		The analysis of colonial trade policy	270
CAPITAL ACCUMULATION	188	Efficiency advantage of trade	273
The savings process	188
The structure of capital	193	10
Wages as net income	199	THE ANALYSIS OF INVESTMENT PRIORITIES	277
The place of money in accumulation	205	Agriculture and manufactures	280
		Industrial development	281
7		Some implications of Smithian international trade theory	283
TECHNICAL CHANGE	208	An agricultural bias?	286
The division of labour	209	Agricultural development	292
Sources of technology internal to the firm	210	The trading sector	293
Sources of technology external to the firm	213	Direct foreign investment	300
Constancy of materials-output ratio	217	A 'case-study'	302
Wage-rate variations as a motive for labour-saving processes?	219	Conclusion	304
Technological displacement of labour	223
Capital-saving technical change and labour displacement	225	CONCLUSION	305
Agricultural progress	227	Appendix A Eighteenth-century population and national income data	323
Summary and conclusion: Smith and the industrial revolution	236	Appendix B The national product of England and Wales, c.1770	325
		Appendix C Some growth rates	326
8
THE APPROACH TO ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT	242	BIBLIOGRAPHY OF WORKS CITED	328
The state of employment and real wages	242	INDEX	339