

Contents

Preface	vii
1. A Specific Goal for Structural Exegesis	1
Informational and Symbolic Dimensions of Meaning	2
Toward a Systematic Study of Symbolic Dimensions of Meaning	4
Symbolic Meaning as Power	4
The Power of Systems of Convictions	6
Structural Methods and the Study of Symbolic Values	7
The Place of Our Method in Structural Research	8
2. From Semiotic Theories to a Structuralist Method	11
The Aim of This Theoretical Chapter	11
Mythical System, Symbolic System, and Semantic Universe	16
Narrative System, System of Transformations, and Symbolic System in Elementary Narratives	23
Narrative System, System of Transformations, and Symbolic System in Complex Narratives	33
From Model to Method	36
3. Structural Exegesis of Mark 15 and 16	39
Identification of the Elementary Narratives	39
Identification of the Narrative Axes	45
The System of Pertinent Transformations	48
The Symbolic System	59
From the Symbolic System to the Semantic Universe	61
Toward a Study of the Symbolism	90
Appendix to Chapter 3: Narrative Hierarchy of Mark 15:43–46	93

4. Conditions for a Legitimate Hermeneutic	94
Hermeneutic as Prolongation of the Semantic Universe of the Text	94
Two Types of Hermeneutic	97
First Criterion of Legitimacy: Sacred Text vs. Profane Text	98
Mark 15 and 16 as “Profane” Text	99
Second Criterion of Legitimacy: Hermeneutic and the Appropriation of the Semantic Universe of the Text	100
Idea vs. Deep Value	101
Deep Values and Religious Convictions	102
The Appropriation of Religious Convictions	102
The Hermeneutic of a “Sacred” Text	103
The Hermeneutic of a “Profane” Text	105
Notes	113
Glossary/Index	128