

Contents

List of Illustrations	12
Preface	13
Acknowledgments	14
1. Porridge in my Salt: The Plot of This Book	21
2. From Myth to Plot: Adumbrations on the Logic of Evangelical Propositions (Mark and John)	53
3. A Poem Plotted: The Carmen Christi as Border Ballad (Philippians 2.6-11)	66
4. Samaritan and Prodigal as Nonentities: Jesus of Nazareth as Author of Narrative Fiction	81
5. From Myth to Myth: Staying Happy with the Uncommon Nonsense of the Ancient Near East (Jesus the General: 1 Corinthians 15.20-28)	95
6. A Pigeon and the Solidity of Thin Air: πνέων τροπαίαν, pneon tropaian ('Blowing a Wind of Change') (The Prologue of Mark: 1.1-15)	122
7. A Metaphysical Poem in a Space-Fiction Setting: The Name and Nature of the Prologue of John (John 1.1-18)	159
8. Through a Glass Brightly: The Magic of Metaphor (Paul Apostle and Genius: 2 Corinthians 3.18)	184
9. The Intrusion of a Locution and an Assumption into the Autobiography of a Man in Difficulties: But You Can't Nail a Good Man Down (Paul and the Catalogue of Peristases : 2 Corinthians 11.22-12.10)	210

---

10. 'History Is Now [sc. Then] and South of the Border': 'Little Gidding' in the Context of Four Quartets (T.S. Eliot: Critic, Philosopher, Poet. Historian?)	240
11. 'Jerome Begat the Tubas': Notes towards 'Notes towards a Supreme Fiction': Imagination and Reality in a Poem by Wallace Stevens	269
12. The Complot: Literature versus History: Ronald Gregor Smith and History Reconsidered	295
Coda to the Canon: The Plot Thickens (The Song of Solomon and the Sublation of Law: Canticle 2.4)	330
Bibliography	342
Index of References	375
Index Scotorum	379
Ap-Index	384