1 Chapter One—Rituals and Ritual Theory—Introductory Remarks

The study of rituals in the context of an anthropological approach. A definition of rituals as behaviourally autonomous expressions of the human mind. Focussing attention on what is done, how it is done, and what it brings into effect. The need to separate the discussion of rituals from the context of theology and symbolic acts. The meaning of rituals is embedded in the process of doing. The inner logic that makes the individual segments of the ritual acts work. The ritual theory of every ritual is embedded in the logic of the ritual process. Jewish law and Halakhah as rituals. The ritual “cosmos”, or attitudinal space. The labelling-approach to rituals as opposed to a detailed discussion of ritual processes.

40 Chapter Two—Economic Ethos and Rituals in the Religion of Ancient Israel

The Book of Genesis and the ethos stage in the religion of ancient Israel. Ethos as a way of life (in our case, an economic system) that shapes culture at a stage that precedes the one in which a full-scale religion unfolds. In the case of ancient Israel two rival kinds of economic ethos compete for hegemony: Sheep herding, nomadism, tribal organisation versus agriculture, cattle breeding, urbanisation, and monarchic organisation. What brings economics and religious ethos together? Ethos and rituals. The story of Cain and Abel. The cursed Adamah. Abraham, the shepherd. Jacob and his sons. The ethos-duality in the case of Isaac. John the Baptist. The two Enochs. The ritual notion of walking in the Book of Genesis.

94 Chapter Three—The Relevance of Myth for the Understanding of Ritual in Ancient Judaism

Myth is the shaping story behind ritual. Mythology comprises of myths that lost their connectedness to rituals. Myth and rituals in the history of their scholarly perception. The mythic status of philosophical explanations given to rituals. The case of Maimonides. Suggestions for a psychoanalytic approach to myth. The creation of Man in the Tselem of Elohim. Ritual and mythopoesis. Eliade's discussion of myth. Myth, temple, and ritual purity. The mythic status of the Exodus story. The various processes of ritualising the Pessach-event. The mythic status of the concept of the written/oral Torah.

139 Chapter Four—In Quest of New Perspectives in Religious Studies: Halakhah and the Study of Rituals

The doing-modes of Judaic Halakhah. Oral Torah, Halakhah, and ritual theory. Reconstructing the doing modes of rituals from written documents. The introduction of anthropological considerations and parameters into the study of religion and rituals. Philosophical reservations and scholarly inhibitions in the study of rituals. The importance of the study of Halakhah for the study of rituals. The aesthetics of rituals. Mind and rituals. The ritual "cosmos". What do Halakhic rituals do? Intention and intentionality in the doing of Halakhic rituals. Intentionality in the case of laws concerning the infliction of damages. Intentionality in the case of purity/impurity. Intentionality in the case of tithing. Intentionality in the case of sacrifices. Rituals as "language".

180 Chapter Five—Sacrifices in Biblical Literature and Ritual Theory

Examining the studies of Henri Hubert and Marcel Mauss. Jacob Milgrom's work on Leviticus. What do sacrifices do? The factor of transformation in rituals. The study of sacrifices in religious studies. The de-theologisation of the study of rituals and sacrifices. The sacrificial "cosmos". The ritual reality. Meaning in rituals. The non-ideational approach in the study of rituals. A verse for verse analysis of Leviticus 16.

231 Chapter Six—The "Lord's Supper" and Ritual Theory

The study of the Pauline letters in light of the study of rituals. How can Paul inform ritual theory and how can the study of ritual improve our understanding of Paul. Arnold van Gennep and the study of rituals. Paul's views on Nomos in light of ritual theory. Stanely J. Tambiah's definition of ritual. Rituals and essential life processes. A detailed analysis of 1 Corinthians 10: 16-18; 11: 23-26. Concluding remarks in light of Bruce Kapferer's views on sacrificial rituals.
