

Contents

1	The Scientific Revolution	1
1.1	Early Memories	1
1.2	The Scientific Method	4
1.3	The New Astronomy	9
1.4	The Mechanical Philosophy	17
1.5	The Impact of Technology	20
1.6	The Laws of Motion	28
1.7	Universal Gravitation	30
1.8	Induction	35
1.9	Conclusions	37
	Notes and References	38
2	The Human Condition	39
2.1	Introduction	39
2.2	The Arrow of Time	50
2.3	Reductionism	53
2.4	Determinism	59
2.5	The Mind-Body Problem	62
2.6	The Blank Slate Theory	67
2.7	Plato, Popper, Penrose	72
2.8	Conclusion	84
	Notes and References	85
3	The Nature of Mathematics	87
3.1	An Early Influence	87
3.2	Pluralism in Mathematics	92
3.3	Mathematical Platonism	97
3.4	What is Mathematics?	101
3.5	The Infinite	113
3.6	The Mathematical Brain	115
3.7	The Mandelbrot Set	119
3.8	The Mathematical Consensus	123
3.9	The Argument from Physics	127

3.10	Mathematical Truth	134
3.11	Is Our Mathematics Inevitable?	138
3.12	The Irrelevance of Platonism	142
	Notes and References	143
4	Sense and Nonsense	147
4.1	Fundamental Constants	147
4.2	Panspermia	149
4.3	The Standard Model	151
4.4	A Philosophical Digression	157
4.5	The Multiverse	159
4.6	In Praise of Observation	169
4.7	Machine Intelligence	173
4.8	Simulated Universes	177
4.9	Discussion	183
	Notes and References	184
5	Science and Religion	185
5.1	Introduction	185
5.2	Varieties of Belief	202
5.3	The Anthropic Principle	211
5.4	The Existence of God	215
5.5	God's Nature and Acts	228
5.6	Life after Death	233
5.7	Keith Ward	236
5.8	Conclusions	239
	Notes and References	242
	Index	245