

Contents

Foreword	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii

Introduction	1
Statistics on Crime	2
The Nature of Psychopaths	2
Analyzing the Psychopath	4
Conclusion	7
References	7

I The Lonely Stranger

1
The Criminal Psychopath	11
The Diagnosis of Psychopaths	13
Cases of Psychopaths	15

Primary Characteristics of Psychopaths	21
Secondary Characteristics of Psychopaths	27
The Syndrome of the Lonely Stranger:
A Summary	31
Cases of Guiltlessness	31
"Borderline" Psychopaths	33
The Incidence of Criminal Psychopathy	34
References	34

2

The Banality of Evil: "Normal Psychopaths" 37

The Case of Eichmann	38
The Normal Psychopath in Western Biographies	40
The Psychopath and Society	48
The "Normal" Psychopathic Group
in Anthropology	49
Psychopathy in Simple Societies	53
Psychopathy and Culture	57
The Prevalence of "Normal" Psychopaths
in Different Societies	57
References	62

II

The Detection of the Psychopath

3

From Manie sans Délire to Psychopathic "Life Styles": A Short History 67

The First Students of Psychopathy	68
Studies of the Psychopath
in the Twentieth Century	73
Psychopathy in the 1950s	80
Labeling Theory and "Critical" Criminology	81
1960 to 1980s: Some Psychological and Psychiatric Studies	84
Psychopathy as a "Life Style"	89

Conclusions	92
References	94

4

The Problem of Identification 97

"Nothing Works"	98
Progress in Diagnosis	99
Physiological Approaches to Identifying the Psychopath	99
Social-Psychological Approaches to Identifying the Psychopath	109
Clinical Judgment	117
References	125

III

The Origins of the Psychopath

5

Is There a Physical Base? 131

Physiological Insensitivity	133
The Genetic Approach	134
Chromosomal Abnormalities	140
Physique and the Psychopath	141
Neural-Physical Dysfunction and the Psychopath	143
The Hypothalamus and the Psychopath	148
Neural-Physiological Arousal in Psychopaths	149
Hyperactive Children and Psychopaths	150
Conclusions	151
References	153

6

The Social Causes of Psychopathy 159

Experience of Psychopaths in Childhood	162
Rejected Children and Psychopathy	169
Some Effects of General Cultural and Social Forces	171

Some Prevailing Views about Criminal and Psychopathic Behavior	174
A Neuro-Social Theory of Psychopathy	176
Is Psychopathy on the Increase?	179
References	180

IV Changing Psychopaths

7 Treatment of Adult Psychopaths 187

Incarceration	189
Group and Individual Psychotherapy	191
Behavior Modification	193
Drug Therapy	195
Other Forms of Organic Treatment	196
Community Treatment	197
Incapacitation	198
Milieu Therapy	200
Conclusions	202
References	203

8 Treatment of Child Psychopaths 207

Incarceration	209
Group and Individual Psychotherapy	211
Behavior Modification	214
Psychosurgery and Drug Therapy	215
Community Treatment	217
Incapacitation	219
Milieu Therapy	221
Conclusions	223
References	225

9

The Wiltwyck–Lyman Project: A Twenty-Five-Year Follow-Up Study of Milieu Therapy 229

WILLIAM McCORD AND JOSÉ SANCHEZ

Milieu Therapy at Wiltwyck: The 1950s	232
The Lyman Training School: The 1950s	234
The Effects of Wiltwyck and Lyman: 1952–1953	236
The Impact of the Wiltwyck School: 1954–1955	238
Changes at Wiltwyck and Lyman: 1955–1980	241
Wiltwyck versus Lyman:
Twenty-Five Years Later	244
Conclusions	262
References	264

10

The Lonely Stranger, the Law, and Public Policy 265

Are Psychopaths “Responsible” for Their Actions?	267
Is the Psychopath “Mentally Diseased”?	272
The Merits and Limitations of a Sentencing Panel	279
“Dangerousness” and Sentencing Panels	281
Public Policy and the Psychopath	284
Implications for Social Policy	291
References	295

Subject Index	297
----------------------	-----