

Aelia Capitolina – Jerusalem in the Roman Period

In Light of Archaeological Research

By

Shlomit Weksler-Bdolah

BRILL

LEIDEN | BOSTON

Contents

Preface	XI
List of Figures and Tables	XV
List of Abbreviations	XXIV
1 Introduction	1
Chronological and Historical Framework	1
History of Research	6
Sources of Information for the Investigation of Aelia Capitolina	14
The Historical Sources	14
The Archaeological Evidence	16
2 The Camp of the Legio X Fretensis	19
The Camp's Fortifications and Related Structures	25
Structures, Roads and Installations inside the Camp	32
The Roman Dump on the Slopes of the Southwestern Hill	38
A Few Comments Relating to the Army in Aelia Capitolina	42
Possible Reasons for the Sparsity of Remains of the Roman Army Camp in Jerusalem	42
The Role of the Army in Aelia Capitolina	43
Stamp Impressions of the Legio X Fretensis on Roof Tiles, Bricks and Ceramic Pipes	47
3 Aelia Capitolina	51
The Foundation of the Colony	51
The Urban Layout: The City Gates	60
Streets and Plazas	65
The Plaza inside Damascus Gate	65
The Western Cardo	67
The Municipal Forum in the City Center	71
An Ancient Street along Christian Quarter Street	74
The Eastern Cardo	74
The South Decumanus along David Street and the Street of the Chain	96
David Street	96
The Street of the Chain	97
The Northern Decumanus along the Route of the Via Dolorosa	99
The East Forum and the Ecce Homo Arch	100
Summary: The Urban Street System	106

The Buildings of Aelia Capitolina	110
Temples and Ritual Compounds	116
The Temple Mount and the Capitolium of Aelia Capitolina	116
The Temple of Venus/Aphrodite	123
The Cult of Serapis/Asclepius near the Pool of Bethesda	126
Public Buildings in the Southeast of the City	126
Private Dwellings	130
4 Aelia Capitolina in the Fourth Century	131
The Expansion of the City's Limits	131
The Construction of a Wide-Circumference City Wall	138
The Identity of the Population	140
The Christianization of the Cityscape	142
Aelia/Hierosolyma in the Fourth Century: Summary and Conclusions	144
5 Water Supply: Cisterns, Pools and Aqueducts	147
6 The City's Cemeteries	151
The Northern Cemetery	153
The South and Southwest Cemeteries	163
The East Cemetery	166
7 The Rural Hinterland of Aelia Capitolina	169
The Imperial Roads	171
The 'Starting Point' of the Imperial Roads	179
Military Sites in the Rural Hinterland of Aelia Capitolina	183
Military Outposts and Stations	183
A Military (?) Water Device near the Western Road	184
A Military Workshop for Pottery and Building Materials	184
Settlements and Residential Buildings	185
Moza/Colonia: A Settlement along the Western Road	185
Shu'fat	187
Betar, Khirbet el-Yahud	187
Two Roman Villas along the Jerusalem–Eleutheropolis Road	189
The Roman Villa of Ramat Raḥel, along the Jerusalem–Hebron Road	194
A Villa on Shu'fat Ridge, Kh. Er-Ras	194
Rural Cemeteries	195
Manaḥat	195
A Rural Cemetery at Beit Tsafafa	197
The Cemetery of Ramat Raḥel	198

Road Stations	198
The Spring of 'Ein el-Hanniya	198
8 The City and Its Population 70 CE–c. 400 CE: Discussion and Summary	201
From Jerusalem to Aelia Capitolina—Aspects of Change and Continuity	201
Urban Topography	201
Building Materials and Pottery in Daily Use	202
Burial Practices	203
Religion and Ritual	204
Epigraphy and Language	205
The Urban Development of Aelia Capitolina In Light of Archaeological Research, a Synthesis	207
Epilogue	209
Bibliography	211
Index	240