

HENRI VEVER

FRENCH JEWELRY
OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

Translated from the French by Katherine Purcell

With all the original 1278 illustrations and a further 136 newly taken colour photographs

Preface by Evelyne Possémé, Musée des Arts Décoratifs, Paris

THAMES & HUDSON

CONTENTS

VOLUME I

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS 10 PREFACE Evelyne Possémi 11

INTRODUCTION 15

THE CONSULATE AND THE EMPIRE

The Revolution's detrimental effect on jewelry – Dissolution of the workshops caused by the abolition of the Maîtrises – Fashion embraces the Classical style during the Directoire – The influence of the painter David – Confidence returns under the Consulate; the revival of luxury goods – Percier et Fontaine – The great goldsmiths: Auguste, Odier, Biennais – The Emperor's important commissions on the occasion of his Coronation – His suppliers – Nitot – Josephine's extravagance; her predilection for jewelry – Foncier – Celebrations and receptions at the Tuileries; the lavish spending required of the official circles – The marriage of Napoleon and Marie-Louise: wedding gifts of jewelry – Characteristic jewelry of the First Empire: cameos, combs, sautoirs, etc. 23

THE RESTORATION

Decreasing popularity of the Archaeological style – Return of the émigrés; simplicity of toilettes – Economy in jewelry; the use of less valuable stones: citrines, amethysts, aquamarines, etc. – The Duchesse de Berry – The Romantic movement; the passion for the Middle Ages – Gothic and sentimental jewelry – The goldsmith Fauconnier – The principal jewelers – The Bapst family – The Coronation of Charles X – Steel and coral jewelry, belt buckles, 'à la Jeannette' crosses, 'bonne-foi' jewels, etc. 143

LOUIS-PHILIPPE

The expansion of trade and the transformation of heavy industry; improved transportation – The Faubourg Saint-Germain snubs the Château de Versailles – The growing importance of the bourgeoisie and big banking families – The rising fortunes of the business world – The continuing influence of the Romantic movement in literature and art – The Renaissance style – The restoration of the Château de Versailles; the revival of the Louis XIV and Louis XV styles – The 'dandies', 'lions',

'fashionables' – The jewel returns to favour – The main specialists in gem-set jewelry: Wagner, Froment-Meurice, Fossin – Ruolz and electrotyping processes – Christofle – Bapst and the Crown Jewels during the riots – The specialists in artistic jewelry: Robin père, Martial Bernard, Marchand, Petiteau, the Mellerio family – The sword presented to the Comte de Paris carried out by various collaborators – Morel – Duponchel – Ouizille et Lemoine – Mme Janisset – Jules Chaise – Hubert Obry and his trumpeting chasers – Various fashions: ferronières, simulated gold – The 1848 Revolution, and its effect on the luxury trades – The 1849 and 1851 Expositions 219

VOLUME II

FOREWORD 463

THE SECOND EMPIRE

Louis-Napoleon, appointed President of the Republic, encourages business, and the luxury trades – Celebrations at the Elysée – He urges manufacturers to participate in the 1851 London Exhibition – The significance of this Exhibition; the successes of the French exhibitors – Lemonnier, Gueyton 467

The proclamation of the Empire – The wedding of Napoleon III – The Empress's jewelry; her toilettes – The diamond necklace presented by the City of Paris – The wedding gifts of jewelry – The celebrations – The new Court – The elegance of the Empress – Prosperity of the luxury trades – A master jeweler: Alexis Falize 499

Jewelry at the beginning of the Second Empire – Pendant earrings – Gem-set jewelry – The pearls and gem-set jewelry belonging to Princesse Mathilde and other prominent ladies – The jewelry of the 'demi-mondaines' – Mme Musard, Cora Pearl, La Païva, the Comtesse de Castiglione, Thérèse, etc. 518

The 1855 Exposition in Paris – The Crown Jewels – The main exhibitors – The birth of the Imperial Prince, an opportunity for new celebrations – The cradle given by the City of Paris – Froment-Meurice – A comb worth a million francs – Bapst and the tiara worn during Orsini's assassination attempt 570

The Siamese ambassadorial mission – The Burmese ambassadorial mission – Rubies and sapphires	600
The Italian campaign – The Campana collection and Greek revival – Castellani and the Etruscan jewel – Fontenay – The service of the Viceroy of Egypt: a centrepiece worth 1,500,000 francs; cutlery worth 60,000 francs	617
The Empress's suppliers: Fossin, Kramer, Crouzet, the firm of Caillot et Peck, Philippi	648
The Frères Fannière and their artistic conscience – Wièse	665
A master jeweler: O. Massin	682
Various designers – E. Julienne	718
P. Robin and matt gold jewelry – The colours of English gold – Joseph Halphen and his commissions for the Oriental market – Félix Duval – Sporting jewelry	724
The 1867 Exposition – Its considerable success – The Suez Canal and the Egyptian style	744
Emile Froment-Meurice – Various exhibitors – Rouvenat – Boucheron's beginnings – Baugrand – Massin – The advances in gem-set and artistic jewelry – Bracelets and pendants – Chains and necklaces – Auguste Lion	748
Fashionable jewelry – The 'Compiègne' receptions – Foreigners are drawn to Paris – Lavish lifestyles – The golden era – The crash	796

VOLUME III

THE THIRD REPUBLIC

- The war and the Commune – No more jewelry, no more cash – The Empress's personal jewelry and La Païva, Countess of Donnersmarck – Patriotic jewelry; Manteuffel's challenge – The spirit of France; foreigners return to Paris 805
- The first appearance of diamonds from the Cape; the transformation of gem-set jewelry – Several specialists of gem-set jewelry: the Marret dynasty; Alphonse Fouquet; scenes in the life of a workshop 825
- Boucheron and his collaborators – the designers Jules Debut, Paul Legrand, Lucien Hirtz, Lœuillard – Menu – Tissot 868
- The master chasers: Louis Rault, Jules Brateau 948
- Massin and gem-set jewelry at the 1878 and 1889 Expositions 972
- Lucien Falize – His passion for enamel and chasing – He forms a partnership with Germain Bapst – Falize Frères – Several of Falize's collaborators – Le Saché; Olive 984
- Soulens; Jacta; Jarry; Debazeille – The medal replaces the cameo in jewelry – Duval et Le Turcq – Medal engravers: Vernon, Vernier, Bottée, etc. 1035
- Plisson et Hartz; novelty jewelry – The firm of Fontana; the firm of Linzeler 1059
- Several specialists in artistic jewelry: Gueyton, Auger, the firm of Lefebvre, Marie, Frey 1070
- Emile Froment-Meurice – Cartier – Debut et Coulon – Louis Aucoc 1082
- Chaumet; Sandoz; Desprès – An eccentric toast 1100
- Georges Fouquet and Alphonse Mucha 1136
- Ernest Gaillard – Lucien Gaillard 1144
- Old and new firms; the impossibility of mentioning all deserving firms – A few designers and enamellers 1158

Vever in Metz, then in Paris after 1870

1166

Lalique – His beginnings – He takes over Destape's firm – His enthusiasm for work – His gem-set jewelry – His experiments with enamel, glass and ceramics – Works for Sarah Bernhardt – The Salon of 1895 – The reducing tool – Horn, baroque pearls, opal, less valuable stones – The human figure in jewelry – Lalique's success at the 1900 Exposition; his display – The influence of Lalique on contemporary jewelry – His imitators.

1203

CONCLUSIONS

The copying of former styles – The attempts made to rejuvenate the decorative arts – The 'Modern Style' and 'Art Nouveau' – Their origins and development in England and France – The Pre-Raphaelites – Viollet-le-Duc – Eugène Grasset – Emile Gallé – The influences of Japanese art, the inner circles of Montmartre, colour posters – The Salon of 'Art Nouveau' at Bing's premises in 1895 – The peak of popularity of the new style during the 1900 Exposition – Everyone yearns to create 'Art Nouveau' – In France, and especially abroad, the exaggerations of a horde of amateur craftsmen provoke a reaction; many return to the Empire and Louis XVI styles – Nevertheless true artists persevere and improve – Personal creation will triumph over pastiche

1257

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS 1289

PICTURE CREDITS 1305

INDEX 1306

