

Your Language Matters

Critical Questions about Language in a Twenty-first Century World

Victor M. Prieto

Contents

Figures	xi
Tables	xiii
Preface	xv
How to Use this Book	xvii
1 Do We Really Know What Language Is?	1
1.1 The components of language	2
1.1.1 The phonological component: The sounds of a language	3
1.1.2 The lexical component: Vocabulary	5
1.1.3 The grammatical component: Rules to organize everything	6
1.2 The features of language	7
1.2.1 Symbolic	7
1.2.2 Spontaneous	8
1.2.3 Creative	9
1.2.4 Effable	10
1.2.5 Arbitrary	10
1.2.6 Duality of patterning	11
1.2.7 Displacement	12
1.2.8 Complex simplicity	12
1.2.9 Systematic	13
1.3 The study of language: The field of linguistics	13
2 Do Animals and Robots Really Speak?	17
2.1 Communication	18
2.2 Human communication	19
2.3 Animal communication	21
2.4 Machine communication	23
3 Is Your Grammar Good?	27
3.1 What we mean by grammar	27
3.2 Grammar rules: Examples	29

3.2.1 Rule 1: Phonology—There is structured order to sounds of a word	29
3.2.2 Rule 2: Phrase structure—There is a structured order to words in a phrase	29
3.2.3 Rule 3: Morphology—Word affixes carry grammatical meaning in a sentence	30
3.2.4 Rule 4: Syntax—Word order carries meaning in a sentence	30
3.2.5 Rule 5: Morphosyntax—Affixes and word order coordinate to change meaning	31
3.2.6 Rule 6: Discourse—Context affects meaning in a narrative	32
3.3 Grammar options: Just options, not linguistic superiority markers	32
3.4 Grammar options: Worldview and culture trait markers	33
4 What Do We Mean When We Talk?	39
4.1 Cognition and meaning	40
4.2 Context and meaning	42
4.3 Consensus and meaning	43
4.4 Meaning relations among words (the “-nyms”)	46
4.4.1 Meaning similarity, or synonymy	46
4.4.2 Meaning opposition, or antonymy	47
4.4.3 Meaning subcategorization, or hyponymy	48
4.4.4 Similar words, different meanings: Polysemy and homophony	48
4.5 Meaning ambiguity	49
4.6 Figurative meaning	51
4.6.1 The playful and esthetic/artistic use of figurative language	52
4.6.2 The explanatory purpose of figurative language	52
4.6.3 The compensatory function of figurative language	53
4.6.4 The face-saving function of figurative language	53
5 Who Speaks English Better?	57
5.1 Factors causing language variation: Sociolinguistic variables	60
5.1.1 The age factor	61
5.1.2 Gender	61
5.1.3 Social class and education	62
5.1.4 Region	64
5.1.5 Ethnicity	65
5.1.6 Register: Speech style per situation	66
5.2 The role of politeness in language variation	66
5.3 Final thoughts on language variation	67
6 Did King Alfred Really Speak English?	69
6.1 Forces behind language change (why language changes)	73
6.1.1 Economy (or “linguistic ergonomics”)	73
6.1.2 Expressiveness	74
6.1.3 Analogy	75
6.1.4 Language contact	75
6.1.5 World changes	76
6.2 How language changes	77
7 Do We Mean What We Say?	79
7.1 Language use: Beyond sounds, words, and grammar	80
7.2 Contextual factors guiding language use	83
7.2.1 Situation (where and when)	84
7.2.2 Participants (who)	84
7.2.3 Ends (why)	84
7.2.4 Act sequence (what is next)	85

7.2.5 Key	85
7.2.6 Instruments—nonverbal cues	85
7.2.7 Rules	86
7.2.8 Genre	86
7.2.9 Competent linguistic interaction—Conclusion	86
7.3 Language use as an inferential process	86
7.4 Dangers in language use	88
7.4.1 Doublespeak	88
7.4.2 Unwarranted assumptions	89
7.4.3 False advertising	92
7.4.4 Language-related discrimination	92
8 Is Language in Our Heart or Our Brain?	95
8.1 The brain as language storage	96
8.2 Brain structure and its relevance for language	98
8.3 The brain: Difference between human and animal communication	101
8.4 Brain malfunction and impact on language	103
9 Can Anybody Learn a Language?	107
9.1 L1 acquisition: Its nature	108
9.1.1 L1 acquisition is natural	108
9.1.2 L1 acquisition is innate	108
9.1.3 L1 acquisition is universal	109
9.1.4 L1 acquisition is gradual and sequential	109
9.1.5 L1 acquisition is systematic	111
9.2 Second language acquisition (SLA): Its nature	112
9.2.1 L2 acquisition is non-compulsory	112
9.2.2 L2 acquisition is sequential	113
9.2.3 L2 acquisition is time-constrained	113
9.2.4 L2 acquisition is systematic	113
9.3 Suggestions for a better SLA experience	115
9.3.1 Focus on communication in SLA	115
9.3.2 Contextualize in SLA	116
9.3.3 Exploit previous knowledge in SLA	116
9.3.4 Orality before writing in SLA	117
9.3.5 Multi-sensory approach in SLA	117
10 Does Society Help or Harm Language?	119
10.1 Awareness of how society interacts with language issues	120
10.2 Societal macro factors that shape language: Structure, dynamics, history, and beliefs	121
10.2.1 Societal hierarchy	122
10.2.2 History or past experiences	123
10.2.3 Social etiquette	123
10.2.4 Steady cross-linguistic interaction (languages in contact)	124
10.2.5 Beliefs and prejudices	125
Conclusions	131
Appendix A: The International Phonetic Alphabet	135
Appendix B: Body-based Figurative Language	137
References	139
Illustrations Credits	151