

Tripping On Utopia

BENJAMIN
BREEN

Margaret
Mead,
the Cold War,
and the Troubled
Birth of Psychedelic
Science

New York Boston

Contents

Prologue: The Future That Never Arrived	1
---	---

Part I

THE PATTERN (1923–49)

1. Prophet of the Long Future (1923–30)	13
2. Society Is the Patient (1930–33)	22
3. Artificial Paradises (1933–39)	36
4. “A Respectable Word for Hypnosis” (1939–43)	45
5. The Office of Strategic Services (1943–44)	55
6. Operation Bittersweet (1944–45)	61
7. “A Not Unpleasant, Intoxicated-Like Condition” (1945–46)	70
8. Deviants Like Myself (1946–48)	77
9. “The Scientist Is Not Outside” (1948–49)	87

Part II

THE PROJECT (1949–59)

10. Lights Coming on in White Rooms (1949)	101
11. The Psychedelic Cold War (1950–51)	109
12. “Narcosynthesis Is Not Very Difficult” (1951–52)	119
13. The Telephone at the End of the World (1952–53)	127

14. Nembutal and Siamese Fighting Fish (Late 1953)	139
15. The LSD Sessions (1954)	147
16. Gadabout (1954–55)	157
17. The Learys and the Batesons (1955–57)	167
18. Out of the Lab (1957–59)	178

Part III

THE NOISE (1959–80)

19. The Fine Line (1959–60)	197
20. Anthropologists from the Twenty-First Century (1960–61)	210
21. Planes of Fracture (1961–62)	224
22. The Deep End of the Pool (1963)	232
23. Carl Sagan at the Dolphin Lab (1963–65)	239
24. Dialectics of Liberation (1965–68)	253
25. “If Someone Throws Away the Box, Then What?” (1968–71)	267
26. Esalen Sunset (1971–77)	278
27. The Blue Glow of Life (1977 to July 4, 1980)	289
Acknowledgments	299
Appendix	302
A Note on Sources	304
Notes	309
Index	355