

Crafting Medicine

ARTISANS, KNOWLEDGE, AND
THE COMMON MAN IN HIERONYMUS
BRUNSCHWIG'S BOOKS ON
SURGERY AND DISTILLATION

Tillmann Taape

The University of Chicago Press CHICAGO AND LONDON

Contents

Abbreviations and Conventions * ix

Part I. Crafting Medicine in the Early Age of Print

INTRODUCTION. Medicine, Artisans, Books, and Knowledge * 3

1. ARTISANS, HEALERS, HUMANISTS: Practicing and Writing Medicine in Strasbourg, ca. 1500 * 17

Part II. Crafting Surgical Identities

2. BETWEEN CRAFT AND LEARNING: Negotiating the Place of Surgery in the Medical Landscape * 31
3. BODY, HONOR, HEALTH, AND HANDWORK: Surgeons in the City of Artisans * 55

Part III. Distilling Knowledge

4. DISTILLING MEDICINE: Subtle Remedies for Fluid Bodies * 71
5. WORKING WITH MATTER * 97

Part IV. Crafting Medicine: Embodied Knowledge, Experience, and Print

6. “THE HABIT OF THOSE WHO HAVE DONE IT OFTEN”: From Embodied Experience to the Virtual Apprenticeship of Print * 115
7. GATHERING BREADCRUMBS: Experience and Erfahrung in Brunswick’s Vernacular Empiricism * 129

Part V. Crafting Text: Readers, Editors, Translators

8. DREAMING OF VERNACULAR READERS:

“Common Medicine” and the Striped Layman * 159

9. CUTTING WORDS, DISTILLING EXPERIENCE:

The Vernacular Text Work of Translation * 179

10. READING AND WRITING MEDICINE:

Annotations in Brunschwig’s Books * 211

CONCLUSION. Crafting Knowledge in Early Modern Europe * 233

Acknowledgments * 241

Notes * 243

Bibliography * 303

Index * 327