Contemporary art and ecological transformation in East and Southeast Asia

Edited by

Meiqin Wang

MANCHESTER UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of figures ix
List of contributors xiii
Acknowledgements xvi

Introduction: Artistic remediation and ecological transformation: Navigating the intersection of art and ecology in East and Southeast Asia – Meiqin Wang 1

1 The prescription from ecological art: Non-human perspective and Eastern philosophies as ways to remedy – Zheng Wan 22

2 Landscape painting without nature: Honda Takeshi's art from an ecocritical viewpoint – Hiroki Yamamoto 44

3 Micro-acts in public spaces: Yuko Mohri's Moré Moré (Leaky) series – Kristen Sharp 68

4 Towards a posthumanistic approach: Exploring Danka ethnicity-based artworks – Jian Xiao and Linlin Wei 92

5 The Healing Garden Project: Eco-public artivism and the development of ecological aesthetics in contemporary China – Meiqin Wang 112

6 Art for regenerating tribal tradition and environmental sustainability: The Mipaliw Land Art Festival – Wei-Hsiu Tung 139

7 Benesse Art Site Naoshima and sustainable living: Activating effective climate change adaptation with art project – Midori Yamamura 161

8 A socially engaged approach to preserving disappearing villages: The case of artistic activism in New Who Art Village – Danzhou Li 189

9 'Infra-aesthetics' of sand mining in Southeast Asia: Artistic visualities and their audiences – Stéphanie Benzaquen-Gautier 210

10 From reaction to relation: The deliberative approach of Pangrok Sulap in environmental art activism – Krystie Ng 235

11 Fighting military imperialism with ecofeminism: The artistic practice of Gangjeong peace activism – Vicki Sung-yeon Kwon 258

Index 280