

Contents

Beyond the Confines of the Nation: Another Dimension of Liberation Politics in Southern Africa. An Introduction by Reinhart Kössler	X
Acknowledgements	XII
Introduction	XIV
1 Research Overview and Theoretical Framework	1
Current research. An overview	1
Room for manoeuvre? A theoretical framework	4
Determinants for the degree of support	5
Criteria for a well-founded analysis	8
About the concept of sovereignty	13
Validity of approaches of International Relations Theory	15
2 Historical Basis	18
Botswana	18
The Bechuanaland Protectorate	18
The incorporation issue	20
The Seretse Khama Affair	23
Developments in the first years after independence	24
Botswana's geopolitical and economic situation	26
Room for manoeuvre or dependence?	28
Political freedom for the Bechuanaland Protectorate	28
Political freedom for the Republic of Botswana	30
Namibia	34
An outline of historical developments in South West Africa	34
The Namibian liberation struggle	35
SWANU	37
SWAPO	40
Co-operation across the border	41
Botswana's Ovaherero	42
Co-operation in an international context	46

3 Methodology	48
Archival studies	48
British National Archives	48
Botswana National Archives	48
Interviews	49
Oral history	49
Selection of interviewees	51
Design of the interviews	51
Evaluation of the interviews	53
4 Government Attitude	54
General policies in the Bechuanaland Protectorate and Botswana	54
General refugee policy	54
General policy towards the liberation movements	57
Immigration and refugee legislation	58
Bechuanaland Protectorate	58
Botswana	63
The Namibia question and international relations	67
The Rhodesias	67
Zambia	71
The Organisation of African Unity (OAU)	72
UN Council for Namibia	75
The South African neighbour	76
Pressure from South Africa and Botswana's reaction	76
Violation of Botswana's territory	81
Conclusion	84
5 The Role of Residents and Organisations in Botswana	86
Botswana's Ovaherero	88
Mbanderu activities in Ngamiland	89
Chief Munjuku	89
Daniel Munamava	91
Help from the Herero communities	94
The Ovaherero in western Botswana	95
The Ovaherero of Mahalapye	96
The question of the Herero chieftainship	98
Political and ethnic cleavages	99

Recruitments in Botswana	100
Support from the Batswana and others	104
Political parties	107
Bechuanaland People's Party (BPP)	108
Botswana Independence Party (BIP)	110
Botswana National Front (BNF)	112
Botswana Democratic Party (BDP)	114
The Namibian liberation struggle in Botswana's domestic politics	115
International aid agencies and welfare organisations	116
The attitude towards the welfare organisations in Bechuanaland and Botswana	116
The assistance of the various organisations and agencies	118
Conclusion	119
6 SWANU	121
SWANU's structures on the way to exile	122
Motives for leaving Namibia	122
The route into exile	125
The organisation of SWANU in Botswana	127
Daniel Munamava as a representative	127
SWANU's "agents" in Botswana	129
SWANU activities in Botswana	131
Propaganda in Ngamiland	131
Botswana: A meeting place for External Council and National Executive	133
Consultation with the National Executive in 1964	133
A mission in 1966	135
SWANU refugees: The second wave	137
A build-up of SWANU refugees	137
Representatives of the "second wave" group	138
The protracted stay of the SWANU refugees	139
Attempts to launch an armed struggle	142
Plans of the External Council	142
The Revolutionary Council	144
Conclusion	146
7 SWAPO	148
SWAPO's structures on the way to exile	149
Preparation for exile	149

The route into exile	150
The way to Botswana	150
The WENELA option	152
SWAPO refugees in Botswana	156
SWAPO's structures in Botswana	158
SWAPO representatives in Francistown	159
Maxton Joseph Mutongulume	159
Gideon Kasheta	164
Luckeyel Baki "Lucky" Shoopala	165
SWAPO representatives in Botswana up until Namibian independence	168
SWAPO: Active on Botswana's territory	169
Organisation from Botswana	169
Problems created by the presence of freedom fighters and refugees	173
A training camp in Botswana: A brief illusion	175
SWAPO's relations with SWANU in Botswana	177
Conclusion	179
8 The Makunda Refugees and Nudo	182
Mburumba Kerina	183
Kerina's situation after his expulsion from SWAPO	183
Kerina and his movements	184
Preparations for the movement	186
Bechuanaland	186
Namibia	187
The movement	188
The movement and the sudden stop	188
British reaction	190
The plight of the Herero group	194
Efforts to move on	198
The involvement of SWAPO and SWANU in the Makunda case	201
Relations with tribal leaders	204
Consequences of the protracted stay in Botswana	206
A last attempt	206
The continuing presence in Makunda	207
The question of resettlement	210
Conclusion	212

9 Conclusion	215
The impact of the territory and its people	216
The Bechuanaland Protectorate	218
Botswana	220
Action alternatives	223
Mozambique	224
Malawi	226
Botswana's approach in light of the presented alternatives	228
Current relations between Namibia and Botswana	229
The overall relevance of this book	231
Final remarks	234
Appendix
List of Abbreviations	238
List of Maps and Photographs	240
Sources	242
Bibliography	252
Index	263