

CONTENTS

	Plates	vii
	Preface	ix
	Introduction	1
1	Street Ballads and Broad­sides: The Foundations of a Class Culture	8
	i Broad­sides and Traditional Customs	9
	ii The Printers, Sellers and Singers of Street Literature	20
	iii Broad­sides as an Introduction to a New Life	26
	iv The Weavers' Response to Industrialization	38
2	Literature as Propaganda: The Coal Miners' Unions, 1825-1845	60
	i The 1831 Strike: The Struggle for Justice	62
	ii The Miners' Association 1842-4: Testing the Bonds of Union	71
	iii Reaching a Wider Public	81
3	Chartist Poetry and Fiction: The Development of a Class-Based Literature	94
	i The Poetry of Impassioned Truth	96
	ii Chartist Fiction	113
4	Literature as a Vocation: The Self-Educated Poets	140
	i The Writer and His Muse	141
	ii The Role of Nature	147
	iii The Writer and His Public	158
	iv The Writer and His Patron	168
5	An Appropriate Voice: Dialect Literature of the Industrial North	185
	i The Roots of Dialect	185
	ii The Literary Life of Dialect Writers	192
	iii The Subject Matter of Dialect Writing	208
	iv The Limitations of Dialect	225

6	The Music Hall: From a Class to a Mass Entertainment	238
	i The Rise of the Music Hall	240
	ii The Music-Hall Entertainer	255
	iii The Portrayal of the Working Man	266
	 Appendix	 286
	 Bibliography	 324
	 Index	 349