

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
1 What's happening?	1
Digital collections	1
The Information Revolution	3
Reality for museums	6
Conclusions	7
2 Electronic opportunities	9
What has changed?	9
The nature of communication	11
Digitized content	14
Connectivity: wires not walls	16
Brokering information	18
Making money	19
Conclusions	20
3 Museum collections functions digitized	22
Introduction: user pull	22
Collecting	23
Conservation and preservation	25
Research	26
Information provision	27
Education	29
Exhibition	30
Conclusions	32

4	Building the digital collection	33
	Introduction	33
	The components of the digital collection	35
	The issues: collections management databases	36
	Cost issues	36
	Towards a knowledge base: issues around content	37
	The issues: images and the database	38
	The issues: digital video and sound	41
	Copyright and intellectual property rights	41
	Means of access	42
	Conclusions	42
5	Standards and choice	44
	Why do standards matter?	44
	The process of choice	45
	Communications standards	45
	Network operating system software	46
	Databases	46
	Standards for interchangeability	47
	Standards for museum data	48
	Subject-related standards	48
	Standards for images	49
	Standards for text, video, sound, etc.	50
	Conclusion	50
6	Making multimedia: a whirlwind tour	51
	Introduction	51
	What are multimedia productions?	52
	Delivery media	52
	First tasks for the museum	55
	Multimedia projects	58
	Technical tools and tasks	62
	Conclusions	65
7	Let's hear it from our users: design and evaluation	66
	Introduction	66
	Designing for usability	67
	Navigation and control of the system	70
	Evaluation and testing	72
	World Wide Web sites	75
	Have a care for the evaluators	76
	Conclusions	77

8	Digits and people	78
	Introduction	78
	New tasks, new skills	79
	Questions of culture	82
	What will work be like?	84
	Attitudes to change	87
	Conclusions	88
9	The wide, wide world	90
	Introduction	90
	Information sources	91
	Libraries	92
	The international museum scene	92
	Europe	93
	The USA	97
	Canada	98
	Australia and New Zealand	99
	Japan and the Far East	99
	Africa and developing countries	100
	Conclusions	100
10	A crystal ball	102
	Introduction	102
	Technological developments	103
	The Historic City Museum on the Web	105
	Organizational developments	107
	Social and economic developments	109
	The museum's own objectives	111
	And the consequences might be ...	113
	Museums in the future context	114
	Appendix Explanations	116
	Atoms vs bits	116
	Analogue vs digital	116
	Data and information	117
	What do electronic, digital products actually consist of?	118
	Image databases	118
	Databases	119
	Networks and hardware	119
	Software: operating systems and applications	120
	The Internet	121
	Who pays for the Internet?	121
	Internet service providers	122
	Internet connections	122
	Internet facilities	123

Sources and further reading	124
Introduction	124
1 What's happening?	124
2 Electronic opportunities	125
3 Museum functions digitized	126
4 Building the digital collection	127
5 Standards and choice	128
6 Making multimedia: a whirlwind tour	129
7 Let's hear it from our users: design and evaluation	130
8 Digits and people	130
9 The wide, wide world	131
10 A crystal ball	133
Appendix: Explanations	134
Index	137