

Contents

List of illustrations	page ix
Preface	xi
Introduction	I
The question of biblical authority	8
Analogy and the limits of language	12
'Our friend Lazarus sleepeth': a test case	16
 PART ONE: THE FOUR LAST THINGS	 23
1 Death	25
The deathbed: consolation and communication	28
The grave, and the analogy of nature	47
2 Judgment	69
Judgment, the intermediate state, and the millennium	74
Poetic forms and apocalyptic visions	83
Fiction and the sense of an ending	109
3 Heaven	119
Heaven, paradise, and the kingdom	123
Hymnody: heaven in the present tense	136
Heaven in poetry of sacred and profane love	147
4 Hell	175
The fear of hell	179
The theology of hell	187
'From fearful hope into fearless despair': some versions of hell on earth	196

	PART TWO: FOUR LITERARY TEXTS	219
5	Tennyson: In Memoriam	221
	The authority of the heart, and the God of love	224
	The poet of 'the larger hope'	234
	'That better world for which he was created'	240
6	Dickens: Our Mutual Friend	265
	Dickens and Christian doctrine	267
	The first number as proem	277
	'The redeeming action of the world': the Harmon plot	282
	'Come up and be dead': the Wrayburn plot	291
7	Newman: The Dream of Gerontius	305
	Purgatory: 'The Golden Prison'	308
	The poem: 'The double agony'	314
	The oratorio: from verse drama to music drama	325
8	Hopkins: The Wreck of the Deutschland	340
	The dolorous passion	343
	Part the First: 'To hero of Calvary'	349
	Part the Second: 'Thou martyr-master'	354
	Appendix: the Old Testament as the book of hope	367
	Notes	370
	Bibliography	425
	Index	445