

Contents

Preface ix

Part I. African Fiction's Challenge to the Modern West

1. Encountering Africa in Contemporary Western Theory and Representation 3
2. Postmodernism, Cultural Otherness, and the Ethical Stake in Close Reading 17

Part II. Reading African Feminist Fiction

3. Culture's Relation to Identity and Value in Efuru and The Stillborn 37
4. Tenderness, Piety, and Cosmopolitan Humanism in Une si longue lettre 69
5. Acculturation and Decolonization in Tsitsi Dangarembga's Nervous Conditions 105
6. Ambiguous Freedom in Ama Ata Aidoo's Changes 134
7. Self-Assertion, Piety, and Ethical Responsibility in Buchi Emecheta's Kehinde 170

Conclusion: The Challenge of Decolonizing the West's Reading of African Fiction 199

Notes 205

Bibliography 229

Index 251