

CONTENTS

Part One: Introduction	1
Part Two: For Love of Country:
The Theme in its Time	21
I. Romance Revives	21
II. Hurrah for America	29
III. A New-Created World	36
IV. The Midlander in America	56
V. God in His World	65
VI. The Chains of Roses	72
VII. The Title-Mongers	85
VIII. Anglo-Saxon Superiority	92
IX. The Rival Camps	103
X. Emergence of Theme: For Love of Country	111
Part Three: The Development of an American
Identity: A Survey	114
Chapter One: The Historical Romance:
America in the Past	114
I. Introduction	114
II. Crawford and the Use of Foreign Matter:
When Knighthood Was in Flower	119
III. Mary Johnston and the Use of Domestic
Matter: The Gentleman in the Garden	127
IV. Flowers of Zenda: Jingoism in the
Pseudo-Historical Romance	134
Chapter Two: The Frontier Romance:
America in the New	145
I. Introduction	145
II. The Virginian and After:
III. The Formula of the Respectable Western	150
III. The Woman in the West:
Patterns of Frontier Identity	163
Chapter Three: The Society Romance:
America in the Smart Set	174
I. Introduction	174
II. Robert W. Chambers: Salvation and the
Younger Set	179
III. The Woman Errant: The Female Romancer
and her Society Heroine	190

Chapter Four: The Domestic Romance:
America in the Home	201
I. Introduction	201
II. The Male as Hero: Harold Bell Wright and the Minister of Man	207
III. The Garden of the Lord: Gene Stratton- Porter and the Death of Evil in Eden	218
IV. The Final Innocence: American Identity and the Child Heroine	229
Part Four: Conclusion:
The Quiet Indian Summer of the Mind	239
Notes	254
Bibliography	283
Index	335