

Contents

Preface	xi
1 Minimal Content and Intentionality	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 Privileged Access and Minimal Content	3
1.3 Intentional States and Minimal Content	7
1.4 Illustrative Applications of the Concepts	9
1.5 Further Development of Some of the Fundamental Ideas Presented	11
1.6 The Fundamental Intentional State	17
2 More on Minimal Content and Related Issues	23
2.1 Introduction	23
2.2 Some General Remarks on Methodology	23
2.3 So What, Then, Is Minimal Content?	25
2.4 Yet Another Illustration of the Aptness of the Concept of Minimal Content	26
2.5 Ontological Issues Set Aside	28
2.6 Constituting and Grasping Minimal Content: Fregean, Cartesian, and Searlean Comparisons	30
3 Thinking Differently About Thought and Language	35
3.1 Introduction	35
3.2 Standard Meaning and Standard Reference	36
3.3 A New Theory of Thought	39
3.4 The Fundamental Difference in the Current Theory From Alternatives	50
4 The Superiority of the New Theory to Frege's	53
4.1 Introduction	53
4.2 Frege's Theory of Thought	54
4.3 The Two Theories Compared	56
4.4 The Object of Awareness	60

4.5	The Perplexing Case of Dr. Lauben	65
4.6	More Problems for Frege's Theory	68
4.7	Failure of Frege's Stipulation Strategy and a Fundamental Problem for the Concept of Sense: Standard Meaning Prevails	72
4.8	More on Different Language and Different Thought Problems	74
4.9	Troubles for Frege's Discussion of 'I'	77
4.10	Concluding Contrasts and Summary of the New Theory	78
5	Kripke's Puzzle About Belief Solved	86
5.1	Introduction	86
5.2	Contrasting the Orthodox View of Belief with the New Theory	88
5.3	Paderewski Puzzle	90
5.4	'London'/'Londres' Puzzle	95
5.5	Summary	100
6	Use, Idiolect, and Statement Made	103
6.1	Introduction	103
6.2	Use and Idiolects	104
6.3	Statement Made	109
7	Speaker's Referent	121
7.1	Introduction	121
7.2	A Subjective Theory of Speaker's Referent	123
7.3	Kripke's Distinction: Speaker's Reference/Semantic Reference	127
7.4	Residual Difficulty for the Subjective Theory of Speaker's Referent Resolved	136
8	Speaker's Referent and the Referential/Attributive Distinction	140
8.1	Introduction	140
8.2	The Phenomenon at Issue in Alleged Referential Uses	140
8.3	The Subjective Theory of Speaker's Referent Applied to the Phenomenon	143
8.4	Critique of Referential/Attributive Use of Definite Descriptions	145
8.5	The Circle of "Referential Use" and Statement Made	151
9	Proper Names	158
9.1	Introduction	158
9.2	Searle's 1958 Theory of Proper Names	159
9.3	Did Kripke Refute Searle's Theory of Proper Names?	163
9.4	Proper Names and Possible Worlds	166

9.5	The New Theory Provides a Corrective to a Remaining Problem	172
9.6	Brief Summary	176
10	Solutions to Classic Problems	180
10.1	Introduction	180
10.2	Substitution in Propositional Attitudes	181
10.3	Frege's Puzzle	185
10.4	More on Substitution and Transparent/Opaque Reading	190
10.5	Two Remaining Puzzles: True Negative Existentials and Empty Names	192
10.6	Brief Summary	193
11	Securing Determinate Meaning—Part I: Against Kripkenstein	195
11.1	Introduction	195
11.2	A Straight Solution to the Kripkenstein Paradox	197
11.3	The Deeper Skeptical Problem	204
11.4	Kinds of Mental Facts	206
11.5	Recognition of Elusive Experiences of Determinate Meaning	211
11.6	Capturing and Identifying the Elusive	216
11.7	Summary	218
12	Securing Determinate Meaning—Part II: Against Quine	223
12.1	Introduction	223
12.2	Preliminaries	224
12.3	Speaker's Referent (IR) and Quine's Theses	226
12.4	Deferred Ostension and Paraphrase: Asymmetry of the First- and Third-Person Cases	227
12.5	Quine's Quandary, Reference Frames, and the Problem of Particularity	230
12.6	Quine's Quandary, Background Languages, and the Problem of Particularity	234
12.7	Alternative Interpretations, Genuine Hypotheses, and the Vacuity of Quinean Indeterminacy	237
12.8	An Answer to a Quinean Counter	240
12.9	Intended Reference, Mentalism, and Privacy	244
12.10	Objective Knowledge of Another's II and IR; Standard Meaning and Standard Reference	247
12.11	Comparison of the Two Methodologies and General Conclusion	249
	Bibliography	255
	Index	259