
Contents

Acknowledgments	page ix
Introduction	1
* 1 Body Language: Religion, Sexuality, and the Bioluminescence of Metaphor	15
Religion and Sexuality	17
Body Language	31
2 The Stubborn Density of Desire: Religion and Sexuality in Nineteenth-Century Fiction	43
Religion and Sexuality in Harold Frederic and William Dean Howells	48
Passion in Oliver Wendell Holmes, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and Harriet Beecher Stowe	53
Sound and Silence: The Dialectics of Passion	67
3 A Tradition of Divine Lechery: Men Write about the Ministry	75
Aesthetic Liabilities	82
Peeping Parsons	88
Of Falls, Balls, and the Music of the Spheres: Women	91
Ecclesiastical Theater: Preaching as Performance	95
4 A War of Words: Women Write about the Ministry. The Homiletic writers	104
Homiletic Fiction	107
A War of Words	116
The Thinking Heart	131
Seeking the Radiance in Vein of Iron	137
5 Comfort to the Enemy: Women Write about the Ministry. The Parsonage Romance	141

Defining Romance and the Parsonage Novel	145
Falling in Love with the Compleat Clergyman	148
Mirror Image: The Dangerous Single Woman and the Unworthy Wife	156
6 The Fox in the Well: Metaphors of Embodiment in the Androcentric Imagination	167
The Fox in the Well	170
Women	175
Water and Words	187
Elegy: From Water to Tears	196
7 Fatal Abstractions: Metaphors of Embodiment in the Gynocentric Imagination	200
Flight	206
Water	212
Airborne Swimmer, Fish in Skywater	227
8 Conclusion: Words Are Not the Thing Itself	236
Appendix A: The Homiletic Novels and Their Authors	247
Appendix B: The Parsonage Romances and Their Authors	250
Bibliography	253
Index	270