

Contents

|   |          |
|---|----------|
| Acknowledgements   | page vii |
| Note on texts  | ix       |
| List of abbreviations  | x        |
| Introduction  | I        |
| Approaching the monarch   | I        |
| From Scotland to England: the accession of a writer-king  | 19       |
|   |          |
| PART I JAMES, JONSON AND THE JACOBEAN COURT   | 57       |
| 1 'Best of kings' and 'best of poets?': James, Jonsonand constructing the role of court poet                      | 59       |
| 2 The 'abortive and extemporal din': James, Jonsonand the discussion of state affairs                             | 96       |
|   |          |
| PART II JAMES, DONNE AND THE POLITICS OFRELIGION IN JACOBEAN ENGLAND  | 135      |
| 3 'A conversation with your subjects': power, languageand kingship in Donne's early Jacobean works                | 137      |
| 4 'We are in Deed and in name too, Men of Orders ': Donneand the politics of preaching for the King | 169      |
|   |          |
| PART III JAMES, SHAKESPEARE AND THE JACOBEANTHEATRE   | 207      |
| 5 'Let him but be testimonied in his own bringings-forth':Shakespeare, James and constructing the King            | 209      |

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Coda: appropriating the royal word in the 1620sand beyond | 250 |
| Select bibliography                                    | 260 |
| Index  | 270 |