

CONTENTS

Preface	xi
I Introduction	1
1 The Problem	1
2 The Scientific Foundations of Behaviourism	3
Paradigms	3
Methodological Objectivism	5
The Contentual Pluralism of Behaviourist Research	15
3 Conclusion	21
II Positivism, Realism, and Behaviourist Psychology	24
1 Positivism and Realism as Contrasting Orientations toward Science	28
2 The Reconciliation of Positivism and Realism	43
Two Types of Assessment of Scientific Theories	43
The Context of Construction and the Context of Reconstruction	50
The Differential Relevance of Realism and Positivism to the Contexts of Construction and Reconstruction	51
III Behaviourism's Background: The Instigation to Behaviourism in Studies of Animal Behaviour	54
1 The Conceptual Development of Comparative Psychology: 1882-1901	55

Contents

2	Comparative Psychology and Functionalism	73
	Functionalism	74
	Functionalist Comparative Psychology	77
	A Representative Experiment	84
3	The Birth of Behaviourism	87
	Contrast between American and British
	Comparative Psychology	87
	The Behaviourist Reaction	90
	The Incorporation of Positivism	96
IV Implications and Effects of the Incorporation of
	Positivism into Behaviourist Psychology	101
	1 The Institutionalization and Refinement of Psychology's
	Positivism in the Transition from Classical Behaviourism
	to Neobehaviourism	101
	2 Realism and Positivism in the Context of Construction	114
	Problems in the Development of Meaning Criteria	116
	Problems in the Application of Testing Criteria	120
	Problems Arising from the Resort to
	Methodological rather than Logical Criteria	124
	Falsificationism	126
	Operationism	130
	3 Positivism and Realism in the Context of Reconstruction	134
	4 A Note on Paradigms	141
	5 Behaviourism and its Positivism	143
	How Adherence to Explicit Decision Procedures
	Results in Theoretical Fragmentation	143
	Summary of the Character of Behaviourism's
	Positivism	148
V Conclusion: Toward a General Evaluation of
	Behaviourism	153
	1 Systems and Systematic Methodology in Behaviourism	154
	2 Contemporary Varieties of 'Behaviourist' Theory	156
	3 Unsystematic Positive Contributions of Behaviourism	158

Contents

4 The Principal Unsystematic Contribution of Behaviourism as Exemplified by Certain Features of Skinner's Psychology	160
Notes	171
Index	191