

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	VII
Preface Rom Harré	IX
Constructing collectivity with 'we': An introduction Theodossia-Soula Pavlidou	1
PART I. Semantic and pragmatic perspectives on 'we'
Referentiality, predicate patterns, and functions of we -utterances in American English interactions Joanne Scheibman	23
Singular perception, multiple perspectives through 'we': Constructing intersubjective meaning in English and German Richard Jason Whitt	45
Referential and functional aspects of the Norwegian first person plural vi Kaja Borthen and Gøril Thomassen	65
Grammar, interaction, and context: Unmarked and marked uses of the first person plural in Italian Carla Bazzanella	83
The pragmatics of first person non-singular pronouns in Norf'k Peter Mühlhäusler	105
PART II. Interactional perspectives on 'we'
'We' as social categorization in Cha'palaa, a language of Ecuador Simeon Floyd	135
Replying with the freestanding 'we' in Greek conversations Theodossia-Soula Pavlidou	159

Establishing social groups in Hebrew: 'We' in political radio phone-in programs Gonen Dori-Hacohen	187
Why 'we'? Between person marking, ideology and politeness in contemporary Polish Anna Duszak	207
Children's use of English we in a primary school in Wales Amanda Bateman	227
PART III. Genre-specific perspectives on 'we'
"Nail polish – We've chosen the nicest shades for you!" Editorial voice and 'we' in a Flemish women's magazine Martina Temmerman	247
Author positioning and audience addressivity by means of 'we' in Greek academic discourse Dimitra Vladimirov	265
Bulgarian 'we' and audience involvement in academic writing Irena Vassileva	287
On the use of 'we' in Flemish World War II interviews Dorien Van De Mierop	309
"Judge us on what we do": The strategic use of collective we in British political discourse Anita Fetzer	331
Author index	351
Subject index	353