

Contents

INTRODUCTION: THE OPEN SOCIETY AND ITS HUMANIST ENEMIES	1
PART ONE: THE BONDAGE OF ANTHROPOCENTRISM	33
Chapter 1 . Man, Beast and Mental Acts	37
Chapter 2 . Human Flesh as the Price of Immortality	59
Chapter 3 . Two Dogmas of Humanist Empiricism	82
PART TWO: CRITIQUE OF EGOCENTRIC REASON	101
Chapter 1 . Social Relations without Selves	105
Chapter 2 . Myths of the Given and the 'Cogito' Proof	115
Chapter 3 . Possessive Individualism after Philosophical Revolutions	132
PART THREE: MONISM, LOGIC AND LANGUAGE	157
Chapter 1 . Monism and Categorially Possible Worlds	161
Appendix 1 . Trinitarian Semantics	178
Appendix 2 . Trinitarian Meditation	183
Appendix 3 . Ontology, Events and Facts	185
Appendix 4 . From Castañeda's Meta-Platonism to a Broader Monist Semantics	188
Appendix 5 . Postscript on Pluralist Counterfactuals	196
PART FOUR: MONADS IN UNIVERSAL COMMUNITY	209
Chapter 1 . Monadology: Parable of the Cosmic Caterpillars	211
Chapter 2 . Communal Concepts of Pain and Well-Being	253
Chapter 3 . Communal Ties with Past and Future Life	261
IN CONCLUSION: THE OPEN SOCIETY AS UNIVERSAL COMMUNITY	277
BIBLIOGRAPHY	298
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	309