

Contents

Introduction	Wm. Theodore de Bary	1
“Comprehensiveness” (T'ung) and “Change” (Pien) in Ma Tuan-lin’s Historical Thought	Hok-lam Chan	27
Law, Statecraft, and the Spring and Autumn Annals in Yüan Political Thought	John D. Langlois, Jr.	89
Wang Yün (1227–1304): A Transmitter of Chinese Values	Herbert Franke	153
Chu Hsi and Yüan Neo-Confucianism	Wing-tsit Chan	197
Towards an Understanding of Liu Yin’s Confucian Eremitism	Tu Wei-ming	233
Wu Ch’eng’s Approach to Internal Self-cultivation and External Knowledge-seeking	David Gedalecia	279
Confucianism, Local Reform, and Centralization in Late Yüan Chekiang, 1342–1359	John W. Dardess	327
Chinese Buddhism in Ta-tu: The New Situation and New Problems	Jan Yün-hua	375
Chung-feng Ming-pen and Ch’an Buddhism in the Yüan	Chün-fang Yü	419
The “Three Teachings” in the Mongol-Yüan Period	Liu Ts’un-yan and Judith Berling	479
Index		513