

The Religious Design of Hemingway's Early Fiction

by

Larry E. Grimes

Professor and Chairman,
Department of English
Bethany College
Bethany, West Virginia

UMI RESEARCH PRESS

Ann Arbor, Michigan

Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction I

- 1 Fiction in the Fifth Dimension 5
 - Pound's Protégé
 - The Making of the Fifth Dimension
 - Play and the Sacred: Focusing the Fifth Dimension
 - Living in the Fifth Dimension

- 2 In Our Time: An Experiment in the Novel 35
 - The Question of Genre
 - The Correlative
 - An Experiment in the Novel

- 3 Fishing the Swamp 53
 - Nick Adams: The End of Innocence
 - The Wound and the Void
 - Return to the Fatherland
 - Naming the Void

- 4 The Sun Also Rises: Hemingway's Divine Comedy 81
 - Hemingway and the Dialectic of the Sacred
 - Hemingway's Quixote: The Limits of the Hero in the Romantic Tradition
 - The Lost Generation and the Abiding Earth
 - Hemingway's Comedia de Toros

5	Love Play and War Games: An Argument for Hope in Hemingway's A Farewell to Arms	97
	Hemingway's Problematic Narrator
	Love Play and War Games
6	The Religious Design of Hemingway's Early Fiction: An Overview	117
	Nick Adams: The Wound and the Fall into History
	The Wound and the Seal of History: Salvation in the Wasteland World
	Notes	129
	Bibliography	145
	Index	153