

ie
mph
nd

om

; in it
ings

TABLE OF CONTENTS

|                                                                                                                      |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS .....                                                                                               | v   |
| ABSTRACT.....                                                                                                        | vii |
| CHAPTER 1 THE LOSS OF LA MANCHA: “VOYAGE WITH DON QUIXOTE” ANDTHOMAS MANN’S AESTHETIC GERMAN MYTHOS ..... | 1   |
| 1.1 Introduction .....                                                                                               | 1   |
| 1.2 A Lived Myth: The Foundation of Mann’s Mythos .....                                                       | 4   |
| 1.2.1 The Artist as das Dazwischen .....                                                                      | 5   |
| 1.2.2 Das Wort as the Manifestation of das Dazwischen .....                                            | 15  |
| 1.2.3 Infantilism as Requisite for Myth .....                                                                        | 18  |
| 1.3 Transformative-Tension as Evidenced in “Voyage” .....                                                            | 22  |
| 1.4 Arriving at the Stage of Myth .....                                                                              | 30  |
| 1.4.1 Nausea as the Foundation of Mythic-Reurrence .....                                                             | 32  |
| 1.4.2 Creating Between Authenticity and Numbing-Everydayness .....                                                   | 36  |
| 1.5 Der Augenblick and the Loss of (Un)Reality.....                                                           | 42  |
| 1.5.2 The Birth of a Twentieth-Century Mythos .....                                                           | 46  |
| 1.5.3 Quixote as Zarathustra: The Moment of Myth .....                                                               | 49  |
| 1.6 Conclusion .....                                                                                                 | 56  |
| CHAPTER 2 MYTHIC ROOTS: GOETHE, SCHILLER, AND THE TRIPLE GERMANSTAR .....                                        | 58  |
| 2.1 Introduction.....                                                                                                | 58  |

|                                                                                                     |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 2.2 Goethe .....                                                                                    | 62  |
| 2.2.1 Recovering a Lost Sense of Wholeness .....                                                    | 63  |
| 2.2.3 Individuality and the Rebellion Against the Literary Man .....                                | 65  |
| 2.2.4 The Pathos of Entsagung .....                                                          | 70  |
| 2.3 Wagner .....                                                                                    | 78  |
| 2.3.1 Freud, Myth, and the Bridge Between the Conscious and Unconscious .....                       | 79  |
| 2.3.2 Opposed-Tension and the Redemption of Life and Spirit .....                                   | 82  |
| 2.4 Nietzsche .....                                                                                 | 87  |
| 2.4.1 The Saintly Criminal .....                                                                    | 88  |
| 2.4.2 Suffering and the Diseased Genius .....                                                       | 93  |
| 2.5 Schopenhauer .....                                                                              | 97  |
| 2.5.1 Schopenhauer in Buddenbrooks : Freedom and Suffering in the Fall of aDynasty ..... | 99  |
| 2.6 Schiller .....                                                                                  | 107 |
| 2.6.1 Sickness of Weary Hours .....                                                                 | 109 |
| 2.6.2 Völkisch -Refinement .....                                                             | 113 |
| 2.6.3 Goethe-Schiller: Harmony in Opposition .....                                                  | 115 |
| 2.7 Conclusion .....                                                                                | 118 |
| CHAPTER 3 PEERING INTO THE WARDROBE: TRAGIC-INWARDNESS AND THEEARLY STORIES .....               | 120 |
| 3.1 Introduction .....                                                                              | 120 |
| 3.2 An Inherent and Unavoidable Weakness in the German Soul .....                                   | 124 |
| 3.3 Renunciation and Amor Fati .....                                                         | 136 |

|                                                                                                                     |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 3.4 Between Two Worlds: Dazwischen and the Tragic-Abyss.....                                                 | 149 |
| 3.5 The Sweet Burden of Tragedy .....                                                                               | 158 |
| 3.6 Conclusion .....                                                                                                | 170 |
| CHAPTER 4 THE SHADOW OF HERMES: DEATH IN VENICE AND THEOPPOSITIONAL-UNION OF ASCHENBACH AND TADZIO.....  | 172 |
| 4.1 Introduction.....                                                                                               | 172 |
| 4.2 Wonderful-Misery: Venice, Faustus, Zarathustra , and the Depiction of ewigeWiederkehr .....  | 177 |
| 4.3 Plato's Phaedrus , Death in Venice , and the Search for Beauty as derDazwischen ..... | 194 |
| 4.4 Tadzio as Pharmakon : A Derridian Examination of Death in Venice .....                            | 201 |
| 4.5 Venice as Berghof: Death in Venice , The Magic Mountain , andTragic-Authenticity.....         | 211 |
| 4.6 Conclusion .....                                                                                                | 228 |
| EPILOGUE .....                                                                                                      | 230 |
| BIBLIOGRAPHY .....                                                                                                  | 237 |
| VITA .....                                                                                                          |     |