

Contents

Preface	ix
I. □ Philosophy and the Social Sciences	1
Introduction—A Glance Ahead
II. □ David Hume's Science of Human Nature	12
The Method of Inquiry—The Primacy of the Moral Sciences—Aspects of Knowledge—Hume's Experimental Method of Reasoning—Hume's Analysis of Causality—Actions of the Mind—The Relation of Reason to Action—Where Hume's System Fails
III. □ Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries	45
Hegel and Marx—J. S. Mill's Logic of Moral Inquiry—Durkheim's Scientific Sociology—Max Weber and Interpretive Sociology—Criticisms of Weber
IV. □ The Nature of Societal Knowledge	74
Can There Be a Natural Science of Society?—Collingwood's Historical Method—Is Societal Knowledge Empirical?—Social Events—Societal Explanation
V. □ Explaining Human Actions	101
Causal and Interpretive Explanations—Action Theory
VI. □ The Language of Social Science	120
Introduction—Meaning Hypotheses—Types of Behaviorism—Carnap's Intensionalist Thesis—Frege's Intensionalism

VII. □ Scientific Psychology and Intentionality	140
The Problem of Intentionality—Chisholm’s Criteria of Intentionality—“Intentional” and “Intensional”—The Method of Paraphrase— Conclusion
VIII. □ Translational Indeterminacy	159
Meaning Hypotheses Again— Quine’s Translational Indeterminacy
Notes	175
Suggested Reading	181
Selected Bibliography	183
Index	185