

CONTENTS

I. Introduction	page 1
II. Experience and its Modes	9
§ 1. Experience everywhere involves judgment	9
§ 2. Experience and truth	27
§ 3. Experience and reality	48
§ 4. Modes of experience	69
§ 5. Philosophy	81
III. Historical Experience	86
§ 1. Introduction: history a world of ideas	86
§ 2. The world of history: ideas of the past, truth, reality and explanation	101
§ 3. History an abstract world of ideas	145
§ 4. Relation of history to practice and science	156
IV. Scientific Experience	169
§ 1. Introduction	169
§ 2. Scientific method	172
§ 3. Nature	189
§ 4. Logical structure of the world of science: induction, statistical generalization, proba- bility and supposal	202
§ 5. Science an abstract world of ideas	212
§ 6. Economics as a science	219
§ 7. Psychology as a science	234
§ 8. Conclusion: the unity of science	243
V. Practical Experience	247
§ 1. Introduction	247
§ 2. Practice a world of ideas	250
§ 3. General character of practical experience	256
§ 4. Presuppositions of practice: (i) 'what is'	262
§ 5. Presuppositions of practice: (ii) 'what ought to be'. Value	274

V. Practical Experience (cont.)

- § 6. Practice as the transformation of 'what is'
so as to agree with 'what ought to be' page 288
- § 7. Practice an abstract world of ideas 296
- § 8. Relation of practice to science and history 311
- § 9. Practice and philosophy 316

VI. Conclusion 322

- § 1. Theory of experience and its modes restated 322
- § 2. Pseudo-philosophical experience: ethics 331
- § 3. Philosophy again 346