

Contents

Preface	ix
CARL G. HEMPEL, Princeton University
Limits of a Deductive Construal of the Function of Scientific Theories	1
YEMIMA BEN-MENACHEM, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem
Limits of a Deductive Construal of the Function of Scientific Theories: A Comment	17
GUNTHER STENT, University of California, Berkeley
Cognitive Limits of Science	23
LORENZ KRÜGER, Universität Göttingen
How Philosophy and Science Came to Differ	37
JON ELSTER, The University of Chicago
The Nature and Scope of Rational-Choice Explanation	51
MARCELO DASCAL, Tel-Aviv University
Rational-Choice Explanation — The Limits to Grounding: A Comment	67
L. JONATHAN COHEN, The Queen's College, Oxford
Realism Versus Anti-Realism: What Is the Issue?	81
EDDY M. ZEMACH, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem
Epistemic and Semantic Reflections on Scientific Realism: A Comment	97

DAVID M. ARMSTRONG, The University of Sydney
Can a Naturalist Believe in Universals?	103
GILEAD BAR-ELLI, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem
Can a Naturalist Believe in Universals?
A Comment	117
GAD FREUDENTHAL, CNRS, Paris
The Hermeneutical Status of the History of Science: The Views of H�el�ene Metzger	123
PIERRE KERSZBERG, The University of Sydney
The Hermeneutical Status of the History of Science: The Views of H�el�ene Metzger: A Comment	145
THOMAS P. HUGHES, University of Pennsylvania
The Era of Independent Inventors	151
TIMOTHY LENOIR, Stanford University
Social Interests and the Organic Physics of 1847	169
JOSEPH BEN-DAVID, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem
Social Interests and the Organic Physics of 1847: A Comment	193
JOHN L. HEILBRON, University of California, Berkeley
The Earliest Missionaries of the Copenhagen Spirit	201
Index of Names	235