

Installation Art

Between Image and Stage

Anne Ring Petersen

Museum Tusulanum Press
University of Copenhagen

Contents

Preface	9
Introduction	13
Space of perspective, space of experience	13
Situating this book	15
An overview	23
1
<hr/>
Towards a definition	27
Passage works	27
Genre or not?	33
Installation – a definition I	37
Minimum and maximum installations	45
Ergon and parergon – an analytical model	47
2
<hr/>
Articulating installation	55
The body in space	55
Discourse analysis	56
From sculpture, to environment, to installation	59
The ideological effect of installation discourse	66
Space in installation discourse	70
Three main positions in installation discourse	75
3
<hr/>
Viewpoints on installation	91
The aesthetics of presence	91

Contextualism and institutional critique	97
Institutionalisation and categorisation	103
Sculpture and staging	106
Object and event	107
Installation as passage work I	111
Exhibition and photo documentation	115

4

Articulating performance	123
Performance – a new paradigm?	123
Performance as aesthetic expression	124
Performance and performativity	128
The performative turn	130
In the interface between theatre and the visual arts	133
The myth of unmediated presence	139
Performance and postmodernism	145

5

Installation as shaped space	147
Activating space	147
Mona Hatoum: Light Sentence	149
Installation – a space with four dimensions	157
An aesthetically organised space	159
Spatiality	162
Theatricality	168
Fictional space	174
Merging the work's space and the viewer-performer's real space	181

6

Installation as temporal situation	185
Time in art	185
Represented time and reception time	189
Three ways of thematising time	199
The temporary installation	202
Installation as time model	214
The narrative installation	225

7

Installation between image and stage	239
Performative installation	239
Performance, performativity, theatricality	242
The performativity of experiencing art	248
The theatricality of installation art	259
Juan Muñoz and the theatre of the gaze	260
Crossovers between performance and installation art	264
Long-term consequences of exchange	272
Thomas Bang and the scenography of objects	275
A dialectic experience	284

8

Performance theatre between stage and image	289
Avant-garde and minimalism	289
Robert Wilson's theatre of images	295
Space as frame: Hotel Pro Forma	302

9

Navigation, immersion and interaction in video installation	317
Art and technology	317
Subject and object	319
Viewer and work	323
Navigation, immersion and interaction	340
White cubes and black boxes	342
"Teachings" of video installation	346

10

Site and context	351
Site as the source of meaning	351
Site-specificity since the 1990s	357
Site and performance	362
Site as event	372

Conclusion: On the threshold between art and culture	379
Installation – a definition II	379
The open work	389
Installation as cross-cultural expression	395
Installation as passage work II	398

Epilogue: A historical threshold	409
Approaching a historical explanation	409
Decentring the subject, decentring mankind	411
Installation as spectacle and themescape	420
Installation and consumer culture	428
Navigating installation's space	435
Notes	449
List of illustrations	486
List of figures	489
Bibliography	490
Index	501